Elaine Monaco is not a new face at The Reflective Designer in Middleton but recently she has come to be a most influential presence there.

Since owner and founder Joe Barnett's semi-retirement several months ago, Monaco has been building recognition for her shop-at-home design business in Swampscott and Marblehead while staffing the Middleton showroom.

She has been with The Reflective Designer for 15 years, working closely with and being mentored by Joe Barnett.

The time was certainly right for her to take a larger role at The Reflective Designer. The busy design firm needed her and she had spent many years honing her skills.

Monaco's reputation for always doing right by her clients fit in perfectly with The Reflective Designer's philosophy.

"She has the most amazing ability to know exactly what the right solution is and is resourceful and concerned about making the job complete to perfection," says Barnett about his long time associate.

Monaco has studied interior design at Endicott College and fine art at Montserrat College, both in Beverly. Her formal studies are the groundwork which allows Monaco to expertly apply and combine an artistic approach with solid space planning skills. Creative solutions, perseverance, and consideration for client needs are her hallmarks. She is passionate about her work.
